

Abstract

There is disclosed a method, and corresponding apparatus, for determining a clock gating function for a set of clocked state-holding elements, comprising the steps of: for each element, determining the conditions under which the element will hold its current 5 value based only on those inputs which are common to all elements; and combining the conditions to form a gating function.